

A heritage walk through Hampi, Pattadakal, and Aihole offers students an immersive journey into the rich history and architectural marvels of ancient India. In Hampi, they have explored the ruins of the Vijayanagara Empire, including majestic temples and intricate carvings. Pattadakal, a UNESCO World Heritage Site, showcases a fusion of Dravidian and Nagara architectural styles in its iconic temples. Aihole, often called the “cradle of Indian temple architecture,” provides insights into early experimentation in temple construction. This experiential learning opportunity deepens their understanding of history, culture, and architectural evolution, fostering an appreciation for India's
